London, 1893. Clare Tracy, a young journalist in search of fame, has been braving in vain the Londonian fog for weeks. Nor her participation at the medium Eunyce's spiritism session, nor her attendance at an anarchist gathering, nor even her meeting with the famous writer Oscar Wilde have allowed her to dig out the shameful secrets of the Victorian society.

When her new friend, the painting restorer Walter Slade, tells her the strange attitude of the famous painter Adrian Fitzherbert, who lives like a recluse in his Kent Manor, she hopes to catch the subject for a sensational article.

But unexpectedly, she passes from hunter to prey...
